The Tall Block Tower

On a rainy afternoon, Nora and her little brother Ben dumped a big box of wooden blocks onto the rug. "Let's build the tallest tower in the world," said Nora.

Nora put the big square blocks on the bottom. Ben stacked the long blocks on top of them. The tower grew taller and taller. Soon it was as tall as the kitchen chair.

Ben reached up to add a tiny red block. The tower wobbled. Then it fell over with a loud crash! Blocks rolled under the couch and across the floor. Ben's lip started to shake.

Nora hugged him. "That is okay," she said. "Now we know a trick. We need a wide bottom." This time they made the bottom two blocks wide. The new tower stood strong. Ben put the tiny red block on the very top, and it did not fall. They clapped and took a picture for Dad.
